From classroom to catwalk at the Downe House fashion show

Five boys from Radley and Harrow respectively braved the climes of Berkshire and the threat of girls to make their modelling debuts at the Downe House charity fashion show. One 11-year-old girl was so starstruck at seeing a boy for the first time in weeks she exclaimed to a teacher: 'But boys are so gorgeous!' It was all organised by Natasha Low (whose younger brother Ali, over from Radley, got the most whoops) and Victoria Hanson, along with schoolfriends Helena Parker, Ellie Showering and Gussy Bunbury. Sir Mark Waller gave a very poignant talk about the charity – the Charlie Waller Memorial Trust, which raises awareness about the nature and dangers of depression – followed by the show, with some serious strobe lighting to protect various fathers' eyes from the edginess of Mark Fast's designs. Meanwhile, Harrow boaters have never looked so good – there was almost a female scrum when one ended up in the crowd.
